SLU Soccer Team Loses To Canucks

Canton — The St. Lawrence University varsity soccer team played their first international match this afternoon losing to a favored Sir George Williams University team of Montreal, Que. by a 6-1 score.

This was the first team from across the border that coach Tom Cartmill's Saints have encountered this year. Soccer is in its first varsity season at SLU this fall.

The Saints broke the scoring ice in the first quarter when left wing Shelly Briggs (Lincoln, Mass.) rammed a ball between the Sir George goal posts. This was the only scoring in the first 22 minute quarter, and the only score St. Lawrence was to register against the Canadian club.

The Montreal team proved just too much for the Scarlet Saints. Held scoreless for the first quarter, St. George broke into the scoring column with a pair of goals in the second quarter, and followed with a pair in each of the remaining two quarters. The victory kept St. George's perfect record over American clubs in tact.

The Larries were playing without the services of senior captain Art Geurtsen (Lisbon) who was sidelined during the week with a painful ankle injury, and missed the game he had his mind set on winning before the season even began.

The next and final game for the SLU pitchmen will be held next Wednesday, October 24, when the Scarlet Saints play host to LeMoyne College at the new soccer field on the lower campus.

Harness Racing Is Big Business In New York State

Harness racing is big business and continues to provide large sums to the State of New York and the municipalities where race meets are held.

Yellow Caps For Hunters Are Advocated For Safety

Yellow caps and hunting jackets — and even yellow shoes, are recommended for hunters.

Vision Conservation Institute, Inc., a non-profit educational and research organization with headquarters in Philadelphia, not only urged hunters to turn from the traditional red to a golden yellow, but suggested that State Game Commissions make the color mandatory.

Optometric research in Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware, reported Dr. Herman Z. Kudon, of Albany, N. Y., national president of VCI, found that a hunter wearing golden yellow in brightly-hued autumn woods and forests can be more easily recognized as a human.

The next safest color and one which another hunter will not mistake as belonging to a deer or a rabbit, is orange. Reds, plaids, blues, greens and khakis blend too well with the terrain and the game, Dr. Kudon said.

"Traditional red may look good in the showroom of a sports shop," pointed out Dr. Kudon, "but wear it where hunters roam and open season may close more quickly than you anticipated."

Good vision is important for a successful hunting trip, emphasized Dr. Kudon, and the use of golden yellow, from a safety standpoint, will give an assist to every hunter's vision.

GOOD POINT—Coach Darrell Royal describes a play to Texas backs, Charley Ducksieu, left, and Ernie Koy, in Austin. The Longhorns seemed to be getting the point.

Queensboro Team Leads Alley Loop

Hammond — The "Queensboros" are the top team in the Hammond Women's Bowling League with a record of 14½ wins and 1½ losses.

A close runnerup is the Hammond G.L.F. with 14 wins and two losses. Bourdon's Insurance and Gallagher's are tied for third with a 10-6 record apiece. The Schoolhouse Inn stands in fourth with a 9-7 mark.

High average are Willie Lord, 146; Barb Gove, 142, Iris Williams, 137; Lois Lowert, 132; and Joyce Richardson, 126.

The Queensboros hold the high team triple with a 2312 followed by the G.L.F. with a 2273 and Gallaghers with a 2271.

Webster Comes Back With Bang As Giants' Fullback

By Murray Olderman
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

New York—(NEA)—In his old age—football-wise, that is —Alex Webster of the New York Giants became a fullback and saved his career.

A year ago the Giants invited him back to training camp more as a token of appreciation for the half dozen years of service Alex had given them than in any expectation of future value.

At 30, Webster looked washed up. In 1960, bothered by a sac of water on the left knee, his legs weary from muscle pulls, his ribs aching, Alex had been reduced to carrying the ball 22 times in 12 games. For a halfback who earns his keep on the ground, that's like Benny Goodman coming on without his clarinet.

But Webster pushed his way back into a job. Some guys strengthen themselves with push-ups. Alex mastered the push-away. He pushed himself away from the table often enough to drop his weight from a ballooned 230 to 220.

Then Allie Sherman, coming on as head coach of the Giants last year, completed the revival. He installed a twin setback system and, after Phil King got hurt in the last preseason game against Green Bay, made Webster fullback.

This is what it meant: under the old system, playing right halfback, Webster spent half his time as a flanker, going out on the wing every time the Giants lined up strong to his side; now Alex is always deep back in the running position.

The saving in energy alone could light up New Brunswick, N. J. (where Big Red, as the boys call him, makes his home). When he wasn't sweeping the end as a halfback, Webster was doing wind sprints as a flanker and possible pass receiver.

But playing fullback, he's mostly a straight-ahead guy. The difference is sharp.

"I'm not tired any more," says Alex. "When you're not tired, you run better—and you don't get hurt."

Last year, in his seventh season in the National Football League (he played a couple of years in Canada before that), Webster reached his all-time peak as a professional gaining 928 yards, third in the National League behind Jim Brown and Jim Taylor.

He's going at a strong pace again as the Giants' leading rusher. Amazingly, as a target for safety valve passes, flare-outs and screens, Webster was also the Giants' leading receiver after the first month.

When the Giants need the big play, especially on plays for ball-control yardage, Alex is the man. He isn't fast. He could be the slowest back in pro ball for straight ahead speed. And he doesn't have the explosive power of Jim Brown.

But Alex Webster is the kind of old pro the Giants win with.

Collett's Ring Career Viewed By Old Friend

JOHN B. STEVENS

It hardly seems possible that Lem Collett was passed on. I remember him from the first day he set foot in Ogdensburg. We were friends since that time.

Lem first came here at the invitation of the late Victor Dumas, who at that time was promoting fights in the old Floral Hall at the fairgrounds. Billed as amateur fights they were really semi-professional and sometimes a real 'pro' sneaked in under an assumed name.

Back in those days, 'Red' O'Brien, a St. Lawrence University student was a leading lightweight in this area. 'Red' was fast and clever. He fought Lem Collett several times, here and in surrounding towns but truthfully Lem was a little bit the better man and usually came out with the decision, in fact I don't remember that 'Red' even beat him.

Then there was 'Mickey' George, the fast moving cuffing Indian from Hogansburg, who was also popular with the fans. Mickey and Lem fought so many times they became what the fight trade terms 'cousins.' They really went right after it and, while there was no big margin, Lem was the much stiffer puncher and this usually told the tale.

The late Lem Collett

Another that Lem fought on several occasions was 'Lefty' Kennedy, a southpaw battler from Massena. They tangled several times in exciting, rough, tough goes but Lem was the master.

One fight that I do remember clearly was when Lem met the famous 'Farmer' Tracy, billed as the Lisbon plowboy, at the Seguin roller rink, one of the local fight emporiums of the day. The 'Farmer' was tough and could hit like a mule and Lem knew it, but never gave the strong boy the chance to land his well known haymaker. By this stage of his career Lem could hit hard too, especially with his right hand, when he often used on the end of a 1-2 combination. That night it was working perfectly and on several occasions Lem made his opponent's eyes blink and his knees sag. As I remember, there was no knockout but Lem had the Farmer in bad shape and hanging on the ropes when the final bell rang.

In all his fights Lem never was
